History of Peoria

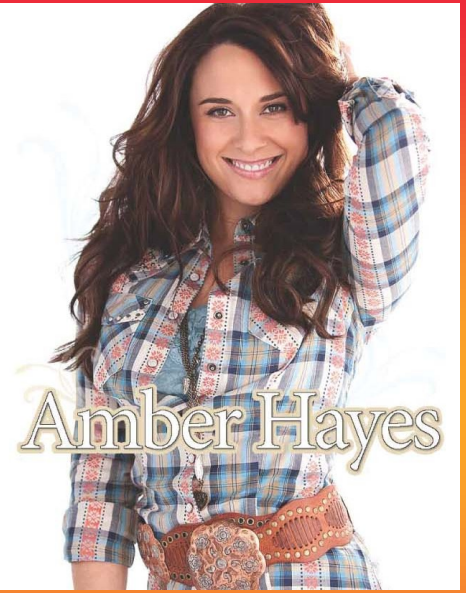

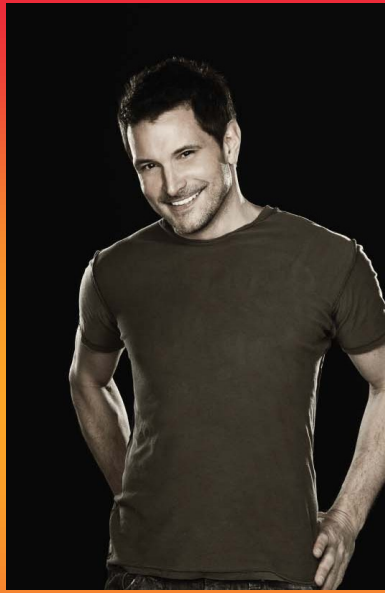

The origins of Peoria are closely tied to the beginnings of Phoenix itself. When Jack Swilling established what was to become Phoenix in 1868, and excavated old Hohokam irrigation canals, it became clear that water was the key to making this desert produce crops. Thus were several irrigation canal companies born. One was the Arizona Canal Company, established in 1882 to provide water to the foothill lands to the west, where there were no old canals to rehabilitate. Hired to head the company was William J. Murphy, a former Union Army officer, and the canal was finished in 1885.

Murphy was from Illinois, and it was to there he returned to recruit settlers. 4 families were enticed by the potential and the climate, and decided to make the move. The town they left was called Peoria. Soon they were in Arizona, at the site of present day Peoria, living in tents, and then simple adobe homes. It was a pretty isolated place, except for an old freight road connecting Phoenix to Wickenburg. In 1887, a new wide road was built by Murphy and others between Peoria and Phoenix; this became Grand Avenue, and quickly became the main corridor between Phoenix and Wickenburg, and points in between. The town was named and the plat map filed in 1897.

As with most of the Valley of the Sun, Peoria was big in farming and ranching; cotton, sheep, citrus, corn, wheat, and rye were major agricultural areas of concentration. Nowadays, there's very little of that still in evidence near the town's core. Today, the town is home to spring training facilities for both major and minor league teams, there are excellent office and commercial facilities, cultural and sports complexes, fine dining and entertainment, as well as shopping, not to forget beautiful Lake Pleasant, Arizona's second largest lake, a major draw for the whole metro area. Something for everyone!

On May 15th Salt River Fields will be hosting the Classic Cars and Country Music Event!

redRockco

Red Rock is at it again. This month they are holding their first annual Iron Gear Sports Rio Salado Triathlon. It's the 3rd event in the Red Rock Co. Arizona Triathlon Series. The event will be held at Tempe Beach Park. Click here if you are interested and would like more information.

Who is Red Rock Co you ask? They are an event production corporation that specializes in multi-sports events. They have hosted events for national sponsors such as Timex Corporation, Toyota, Pabst Blue Ribbon, Danskin, and more. In addition, they also help produce charity events for local and national charities to raise money for non-profit organizations such as the John Wayne Cancer Foundation and Special Olympics of Arizona. Since their inception they have donated $30,000 every year to these non-profit organizations, sporting teams, and numerous charities throughout the United States and Mexico.

Red Rock's goal is to create safe and memorable events for all of their customers. Through their events they want to promote healthy living for all ages. Red Rock creates the opportunity for people to achieve fitness on all different levels with their year-round activities. They are passionate about their product and the result and involve athletes, a charity, and community in every project that they do.

I've personally met the owner, Kimo, as well as Andy with event logistics. They are both great people, very friendly and easy to work with. If you've never been out to one of their events, I encourage you to go check one out!

Help Yourself

Copper, copper everywhere! Including pool pumps and vacuums. In case you weren't aware, copper is a hot commodity right now for thieves. Recently in Tempe thefts have increased so the police department has put out a warning to keep an eye out and take some extra steps to protect yourself from being a victim of this crime. Read about it here.

The never-ending quest to find a work-life balance is actually quite a pointless journey. While it is important to find balance in your life, the perfect work-life balance is like a mirage in the desert. It just doesn't exist. Read this article to see why it is a fruitless objective and turn the tables. It's all about keeping a positive attitude.

Spring is here, and with it, has brought many allergens. I have been sneezing with it, constantly, and I hear my co-workers going through the same thing! I found this article about ways to keep the pollen and dust at bay to help make it through allergy season. Hopefully if you are suffering through this, these tips will help you too!

Excellence is not a skill. It is an attitude. - Ralph Marston
